credited to depositors such dividends or interest as the earnings of the Institution justify, on all sums of five dollars and upwards, which shall have been deposited for one or more calendar months next prior to the third days of January and July, but no interest will be allowed for the fractional part of a month, so that deposits commence to earn interest on the first day of the month succeeding the date of such deposits.

Mr. Howard Biddulph, who has been elected Treasurer and Secretary of the Institution, is a former resident of Bloomfield, and is well and favorably known to many of our depositors and citizens. Mr. Biddulph has for the past six years occupied a responsible position in the Montclair Savings Bank, and comes to us with strong recommendations from the officers of that bank.

All persons having business with this Institution will be treated with courtesy and consideration. The importance of maintaining a prosperous savings bank in a town like Bloomfield, can hardly be over-estimated, and we invite your personal co-operation in our determination to make this Institution one of the large and successful savings banks of our county and State.

Yours respectfully,
The Bloomfield Savings Institution,
THEODORE H. WARD, President,
JOHN G. KEYSER, Vice-President,
HOWARD BIDDULPH, Treasurer,
HARVEY M. BARRETT, Counsel.

Empire Theatre.
The Empire Theatre, Newark, will have what will prove a big bidder for public patronage next week, as its attraction will be Harriet Beecher Stowe's great story, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Although as a result of some cheap productions touring the country this famous play has received ridicule at times, still, under capable conscientious management, as that of the Leo W. Washburn organization, it will ever have the power to make its auditors feel the beauty and pathos of its lines. The Washburn Company, known for years to the public as "Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin Co.," has a larger combination this year than ever, there being two bands, two Topicals, two Marks, fifty men and women and children, the finest pack of Siberian bloodhounds in the world, a lot of beautiful Shetland ponies, two carloads of magnificent scenery for the stage, and besides all this a grand spectacular street parade with tableau wagons and little carriages all worth seeing. For the week beginning Monday, May 16, Matinee Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday.

Portuguese Characteristics.
The men of Portugal are as fond of show as are the women. Their fingers are nearly always loaded with rings, and about their bodies, which are often as round as the bowls of their tobacco pipes, hang chains as thick as ropes, from which are suspended bunches of trinkets.

The Portuguese dandy is very fond of anything that will attract public attention to his much esteemed person. Above his snowy vest he wears a cravat of gleaming colors, while in his buttonhole is stuck a full blown rose of inordinate size. I think I am pretty safe in saying that most of the promenaders I have seen strutting about in the chief thoroughfares on Sunday with a riding whip in their hands and handsome spurs on their heels have never set foot in the stirrup. The spur is to them a sign of nobility which they arrogate to themselves—a relic of the privileges of the old chivalry.—London Standard.

Retailers of Fine Sawdust.
In the shop of a cabinetmaker in New York a sign announces "sawdust for sale." There is no evidence anywhere of the bags of coarse plan sawdust such as is used in butchers' shops, markets and saloons.

"We don't handle that stuff," said the proprietor of the shop. "Our specialty is in the sawdust of fine woods, such as mahogany, boxwood and sandalwood. We sell sawdust by the ounce or the pound, not by the bushel. The sawdust of fine hard woods brings good prices. There are about twelve varieties of it, and each has its appropriate use."

"Boxwood sawdust, the most expensive of all, is used by manufacturers to burnish silver plate and jewelry. Sandalwood is used for scent bags and for the preservation of furs. There is no waste of sawdust in our business."—New York Press.

Where Rubies Come From.
The ruby mines in Burma are of four kinds, the most valuable being gullies formed by the action of water on the side of the hills. Next to these come the shafts, or tunnels, sunk in the hillsides; and then the wells. These last are sunk in the valley, and are of two sorts. The deep wells are sunk to fifteen or twenty feet, and the shallow ones only reach to four feet, where the first ruby bearing stratum is found. Rubies, or rather red stones of all sorts, are offered for sale in large numbers and at every conceivable price. The inhabitants are well off, the miners being either Shans, in their enormous broad brimmed straw hats and baggy trousers, or Chinamen, in Indigo blue.

A Marvel of Wood Carving.
One of the greatest works of Henry Vorbruggen is the carved pulpit of the grand parochial church at Brussels. The whole design is an allegorical scene. At the base are Adam and Eve, life size, expelling the angel, while grim Death himself may be seen hovering in the rear. The first pair bear upon their shoulders a hollow globe, the cavity being the place where the preacher stands while delivering his sermons. From the globe rises a tree sustaining a canopy, which in turn supports two figures—one of an angel and the other a female representing Truth. Above all this are the Virgin and the infant Jesus, crushing the serpent's head with a cross.

One Way to Break Glass.
It is scarcely credible, but it is a fact, that a glass can be broken by the voice. If you strike a thin wineglass while you hold it by the stem it will emit a certain note—in most cases a pretty, deep one. On approaching the glass rapidly to your mouth and shouting into it the same note as loudly as possible, the vibrations of the glass being thereby extended, it will be shattered into fragments. This used to be a favorite experiment of Lablache, the renowned basso, who, when in company with his friends, thus broke one after the other all the glasses that were handed to him.

Our Oldest Bit of Literature.
The book of Job, as it is incorporated in the Bible, is believed to be the most ancient literary work in existence. It is known to have been written prior to the Pentateuch and prior to the promulgation of the law. In profane literature the poems of Homer are the most ancient that have come down to our day, though the names of others still older are in existence. The Pentateuch was written about the year 145 B. C., and the Homeric poems about 640 years later.

The Heavens Seen From the Sea.
Every one who has been much at sea knows something of the peculiar splendor of the heavens when beheld from the deck of a ship. Celestial phenomena seem to possess an unusual impressiveness when viewed under such circumstances. The clearness of the air in fair weather and the flatness and distance of the horizon tend to heighten this effect.

Applying Her Information.
"Mamma," quipped little Florence, "should I say pants or trousers?"
"Trousers, my dear," replied her mother.
"Then," said Florence, "I must give Fido some water, for he trousers just awfully."

Grottoes.
Dumley-Smith is an awful coward. Why, he looks afraid of his own shadow. Lumly—I don't wonder at it—if his shadow looks anything like the original!

Think three times before you speak and then talk it over with your wife. A good wife has more wisdom than the supreme court.—Schoolmaster.

About Personal Assessments.
A point has been raised by the President of the Trenton Board of Assessors in regard to the constitutionality of that section of the law which permits the offsetting of tax assessments on personal property by debt obligations. He holds that personal property which requires police and fire protection cannot legally be held to be exempt because the owners are in debt. Moreover, this exemption was a means of a vast amount of tax evasion and consequent injustice to honest men who are too conscientious to create fictitious debt and swear it off against their personal property assessments.

This question of assessing personal property is not peculiar to our State. It is a vexatious one everywhere. A State tax commission in New York some years ago, after a long investigation recommended that the personal property tax be abolished altogether and all property taxes be laid on real estate. The commission adduced strong moral as well as economic reasons for the adoption of that policy. Henry George would have excepted, also, all erections and have placed the tax entirely on land.

In the nature of things it is impossible to devise any system of law to reach and assess all personal property. Intangible personality is too elusive, changeable and evasive to be always found in the hands of its owners. It can change character and ownership in the twinkling of an eye and by the scratch of a pen, and nothing short of the preternatural can arrest or detect it in its transition. If all tax reform waits upon a perfect system of personal tax assessment there never will be any reform.

But we can deal with the visible and tangible and the point taken that such property as is protected by fire and police establishments in municipalities should help pay the expenses of the same and should not escape because of bank discounts or debts to people outside the State, is certainly well put. We believe it has not been adjudicated upon.—Newark Daily Advertiser.
